We thought Tapatak's first workshop at Greenvale was great so we invited them back for a second time. They worked with lower and upper school students and provided a really exciting session for everyone. We cater for secondary aged students with severe learning difficulties and some students have profound and multiple disabilities so involving everyone can be a challenge. The three performers engaged all the students providing a stimulating but well controlled workshop. They judged the mood well so that, although the students were excited, they returned to class at the end calm and pleased with the new skills they had learnt. Each session was well structured, building up different components to a mini-performance. The different strands of the workshop – dance, singing, “poi” and drumming meshed together so well and gave everyone a sense of achievement.
